Accreditation tradeoff for library basement XXKissoff missile sites buried in books range

In a bold move designed to guarantee accreditation, UAJ administrators have reached agreement with the United States government (U.S.G.) over locating their XX missiles.

The U.S.G. has guaranteed to support full UAJ accreditation in return for a 200 year lease on the library basement to store their IBCM missiles.

Spokesman for the University,

Wiley Olson said, "The librarians plan to burn all the books. After hearing about the kissoff, they began chanting "Better read than dead, better read than dead, and

UAJ teams win NCAA championships in football, basketball and hockey

The UAJ Dogfins won all three events at the recent NCAA major sport's weekend "Hell on Frozen Auke Lake."

The lake was definitely a factor as the bottom ranked UAJ football team led by L. Braidy outskated the five-year record holding UAA Quillbacks. The Dogfins had neglected to inform their opponents that the field was solid ice, thereby giving a keen footage advantage.

Similarly equipped Linda Martini's basketball team outclassed defending champions UA, Nome Icebergs in front of a lake shore capacity crowd of 80,000.

The highlight of the 3 day event was the battle between UAJ hockey and arch rival UAF. The Seadogs, recently awarded $1 million for team housing by the 1981 legislature, fought fiercely against the fins, who had not won a game since the school became UAJ. The heated game remained scoreless until with 2 seconds left and all players except the goalies in the penalty box, team mascot Joshua buried the puck in the UAF backstop.

Coaches Tribble, House and Hubbard are to be congratulated. Also thanks to the Lord and the lake.

Fisheries building converted into dorms; students protest with mass swimout

Dateline 1984--Due to pollution caused by the recently built Auke Bay Marina, the fisheries department has closed its doors to classes in preparation for its conversion into coed dormitories.

Fisheries students protesting the building's closure staged a mass swim out into the Bay. Fortunately all protesters choked on incoming bilge and drowned, thus alleviating the University's problem of what to do with B.S. in Fish candidates.

HOOKER BUTTONS—sporting on satin or worn on wool—the graphically invitational hooker buttons add the final touch of distinctive dedication to a spring ensemble and show the world (including legislators) that UAJ students will do anything to aid the accreditation effort.

A TERMINAL, GET BUMPED OFF GRACEFULLY...

This sign proves the Bill Ray Center clearly caters to the computer crazies. People pupating into pac-man packages are packed out peacefully to pioneer homes to ponder their point-of-no-return before they pack it all in.

Alumni gifts cause storage space shortage

UAJ Alumni and friends generously answered an appeal for donations to aid the accreditation cause, said Wayward Linskooky who spearheaded the drive.

Linskooky said the largest donation, an anonymous one from Lieall Cubbard, was the whale skeleton recently washed up on the fisheries beach.

Other donations included 3 dozen canned resums, 2 pair of leaky hoonahwing tips, 7 moldy vending machine sandwiches, 5 misfiled transcripts and a hooker button.

The following is a sample of the letter sent to all 8 alumni and 7 friends:

Dear Alumniuses:

We at UAJ don't know what to think! Our repeated appeals for accreditation help appear to have been ignored by you. This time please send what you can so we will know to think of you.

Sincerely,
Wayward Linskooky

Capital move a capital failure

On April 1, 1982 the Alaska legislature overwhelmingly voted in favor of moving the capital to a moveable site.

"The new capital will be a ship named MISS JUNEAU and built of willows," said one legislator who wished to keep his non-identity unknown. "Then the capital can be in Willow, Juneau or docked anywhere anyone wants it."

"The MISS JUNEAU Capital can float anywhere. We've even ordered Goodrich tires, so our on-the-go capital can travel by land as well as sea," said the unknown legislator.

Already many Alaskan cities and villages have requested to be capital for a week. The Russians have expressed an interest in renting the moveable capital for three cents a square foot.

Juicy phone installed by student government

After much technical research and debate, the UAJ Student Government, using student activity money installed a telephone in their office.

"The phone is made out of orange juice cans and string," UAJ Student Government President Laura Brady said. Brady stressed that the cost of the Minute Made phone was only slightly over the Student Government's budget of 5 cents.

"We do have a problem with the string string all over campus," Brady said. "Students keep tripping on it, but we're working on the problem."

An uninformed source said dogs roaming around campus have been hired to bury the string.

The event of UAJ's spring social season

Miss Patsy Motherly, Commencing Committee Representative, called for four formal students for graduation. Promising that UAJ's first formal graduation will be THE Motherly appealed for students to attend.

UAJ personalities on the move

WASHINGTON POST
RES SCHMIDT-CASH
y Zungaria Yungki-Torun.

In a desperate effort to beef up circulation, the WASHINGTON POST announced the firing of Bradley and the hiring of Sandra Schmidt-Cash as the new managing editor.

"I knew it would happen for me someday. I really did not expect it this soon," Schmidt-Cash said.

"Of course I will finish the semester at UAJ and remain as editor until a suitable replacement is found," Schmidt-Cash said of her immediate plans and then added, "It is my duty to UAJ, but then I plan to drop Ken, the kids, sell everything and buy a condominium in the Watergate Building. Wouldn't you do the same thing for $90,000 a year?"

Schmidt-Cash is already planning to write her first best seller titled ALL THE CHANCELLOR'S MEN.

"It should make a million and become a movie in no time. It will probably star Dudley Moore as the chancellor and Walter Matthau and Don Adams as the vice chancellors. Of course, Olivia Newton-John will star as the ace reporter. I like her. She has a hyphen in her name," Schmidt-Cash stressed.

KEIM QUILTS UAJ
by Lunda Lubango

After eight years of dedicated service to UAJ, Vice Chancellor Harry Keim will retire and start his own business.

"It was a tough decision. However, I do feel that these many years with UAJ have given me the training, experience and direction I need to make it in the private sector," Keim said.

The University will hold a beer blast pizza party at Bullwinkles to honor Harry and wish him success in his new venture. What is this new venture? Harry's Vending--what else?

JOINT EFFORT
PRODUCES NEW LIBRARY
by Kaschau Temesvar

Jim Moore and Alan Schorr have solved the library space problem. Jim's welding class is constructing a huge barge on Auke Lake to be used as the new library facility. The new building, named Calipso III, will house a collection of 1,875,000 volumes, media services, study space for 300 students, a ballet studio and Lyle Hubbard's office. Expected completion date: September 1. Thanks, Jim and Alan. You do good work.

WIRES CROSSED AT RAY CENTER
by Toulouse Rouen

Robbie Stell, Paul Troeh and Larry Stevens were saved by the J-D rescue squad after spending a week-end locked in the Ray Center. Rescue workers extracted the three from 40,000 feet of audioconferencing chord after the police received an anonymous tip on the dynamic trio's whereabouts. Robbie isn't talking, Paul is still trying to network and Larry wants to know what went wrong.

STUDENTS TAKE CHANCE
by Janina Salonika

Chick Fields reports that results of the official financial aid survey show that the average UAJ student is living, a part-time male or female, stands between four feet and seven feet tall, weighs most issues carefully and pursues a course of self-destruction.

Shelia Colbert-Kerns, UAJ's most renowned personality, discusses her best selling book, Sizzling Student Services, with talk show host Johnny Carson.

UAJ Student Services name was changed to Office of Financial Aid, Counseling Center, Student Government mailbox location and place-to-give-the-most-parties less than ten minutes after Sizzling Student Services reached the public.

Colbert-Kerns refused to comment.

Baleen Cuisine

Ken Cash

(Columnist's note: This week's "Baleen Cuisine" is featuring a friend of mine from France, Hote Q. Zeen. Hote, better known as HQ, is renowned across France as the toughest critic and rumor monger in the business; restaurateurs refer to him--behind his back--as the Rona Barrett of the restaurant set. Therefore I gladly give him all the credit for this column.)

Is it true that Burger King is buying property near the glacier so you can eat the whopper while you park?

Is it true that FDA is investigating a local hangout because, since there are no locally grown cattle, that hamburgers cannot be Juneau made?

Is it true that a wild moose broke into a local pizza parlor and tried to mate with a wall decoration?

Is it true that a Juneau restaurant's picture appeared in a National Magazine, but that the word Juneau was misspelled?

Which Juneau restaurant puts powdered rhino horn in the main course? You can tell by the way the patrons act when they get to the parking lot.

Well folks, I just had to cut HQ off because the things he said about Jovany's, The Latchstring and Mike's are utterly unprintable.

A bushel of starfish for Hote Q. Zeen, dumped on his head, and a happy April Fool's to you.
